SORROWFUL TALE OF THE SEA.

Three seamen dead, sails carried away, deckload of lumber washed overboard, deckhouses battered in by the waves, make up the harrowing tale of the sea told by First Mate Frank Langan, of the American bark Peabody, in command of Captain Dooms, which arrived in Baltimore yesterday with a cargo of asphalt from Trinidad, West Indies.

The members of the crew who never returned on the bark were Carroll Bray, son of Capt. Bray, former master of the Peabody, who was taken ill with pneumonia, died and was buried at sea; Second Mate John Lockwood, who was injured by the cargo being carried overboard, and who also died and was buried on the Gold Coast, and Seaman John Nelson, who was drowned at Trinidad and was buried on the island.

When the trim bark sailed from New York January 22 bound for ports on the west coast of Africa, she had as happy a crew as ever trimmed the main brace, and not one had any premonition of the distressing voyage ahead.

The Peabody had hardly cleared Sandy Hook when she encountered a terrific northwest hurricane, accompanied by mountainous seas. Notwithstanding the vessel was put under reduced sail, huge seas swept her fore and aft. A monster sea struck the vessel over her starboard bow, smashing in the forward deck house and shifted her cargo of lumber. Her cabin and store house were flooded, damaging her supplies so that the crew had to live on hard bread and canned meats the rest of the voyage. A second heavy sea struck the unfortunate vessel, throwing her on her beam ends, sweeping overboard Second Mate John Lockwood and part of the deck load of lumber. The bark was at once layed to and a crew manning the lifeboat succeeded in saving Lockwood, who managed to keep afloat with the assistance of some floating lumber. The following day was spent by the crew trying to get the cargo in shape, when a second storm came on, more terrific than the first, and while the crew were manning the pumps a giant sea struck her, sweeping overboard the entire deck load of lumber, part of which jammed Mate Lockwood against the ship's capstan, injuring him to such an extent that he died when the vessel arrived at Cape Coast Castle, one of the discharging ports.

Mate Langan stated that the seas during the second gale were terrible to behold. Many of the sails had already been carried away and the vessel presented a pitiable appearance. The gale finally subsided, temporary repairs were made and from then on the trip was good to the bark's arrival at Axim, reaching that port 56 days out from New York.

The vessel's cargo was distributed at about 15 p.m. on the west African coast, finishing at Lome, one of the German possessions. The bark then cleared for Trinidad, where she was ordered to take on her present cargo.

THREW RED PEPPER.

Mrs. Nathan Schwartz was alone in her husband's jewelry store in New York yesterday afternoon when a well-dressed young man entered and asked to see an assortment of gems.

Smiling sweetly—she hadn't been married long—Mrs. Schwartz spread out a tray of glittering rings. The young man picked out one for $150 and held it up to the light. As he did so he dropped one hand into his pocket, drew it out suddenly and threw a handful of red pepper into Mrs. Schwartz's eyes.

Then, while she groped about blindly, screaming in agony, he picked up the remaining rings and darted out. His greed was fatal, for the slight delay gave Mrs. Schwartz time to utter a shriek that startled the neighborhood. George Townsend was passing the shop and, hearing the cry and sizing up the attitude of the departing thief, he grabbed hold of the man. They went to the pavement together with Townsend on top. Policeman Boss came along and arrested the thief.

Mrs. Schwartz was temporarily blind, but in the police station she identified the prisoner by his voice. The stolen rings were found in his pockets. He said he was William Armstrong, 20, an embroidery worker, of Plainfield, N. J.

LIVED TOGETHER IN SILENCE.

A report was received on Tuesday at Worcester, Mass., that Major William F. Pond, a wealthy resident of that city, died at Johnson City, Tenn., after a short illness. It has long been reported that Pond and his second wife, married for more than forty years, lived in their mansion without exchanging a word for more than 20 years. Mrs. Pond says only 14 years, however, and but twice in the remaining six.

A short time ago Pond attempted to transfer his property to his children, but his wife secured an injunction restraining the transfer, alleging fraud. He then started for Johnson City to live with his sister. Before reaching his sister's home she died. Her death came as a great surprise, and he never recovered from the shock. Pond was 81 years old.

CALIFORNIA'S BIG YIELD OF WALNUTS.

Nine thousand tons of English walnuts is the estimate of experts on this season's yield in southern California. This will be the largest crop ever harvested, and 2,000 tons above that of a year ago. Weather conditions have been extremely favorable, and unless there should be a sudden appearance of blight or an unusually hot summer it is expected the harvest will exceed the estimate.

Local dealers incline to the belief that market prices will be considerably lower than last year, when the production was less than 7,000 tons, somewhat below the average. —[San Francisco Call.]
